(d) if so, the steps contemplated by Government it this regard; and

(e) if answer to part (a) be in negative, the manner in which Government propose to tackle the problem of rising corruption in D.D.A.

THE MINISTER OF URBAN DEVELOPMENT (SHRI JAGMOHAN): (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) In a chapter entitled on "making cities livable" under the sub-heading "service provision in developing countries" in this year's World Development Report, the World Bank has stated as under:

" ..... K.J. Alphons, described the agency he worked for, the Delhi Development Authority (DDA), as "the most corrupt institution in the country". Those who corrupt it, he added, help illegal builders grab DDA land and then build houses and shops that are sold to unwitting buyers. Unauthorised buildings range from shanties for the poor to shopping centres for the middle class to mansions for the rich, all established on Government land under false pretenses, with political complicity. Moreover, Alphons reported nothing gets built, legal or illegal, without a bribe....."

The acting Vice-President, External Affairs, World Bank, Washington has clarified to the DDA that the quotation was originally printed in May 4, 1995, issue of the Farr Eastern Economic Review and that the World Development report has published the same in good faith, and was not directed at any individual or an association of individuals.

The above statements pertaining to DDA are a not based on any scientific studies.

(c) to (e) The Estimates Committee of the Parliament has examined the entire Working of the DDA in detail and submitted its report in March, 1997.

The Delhi Development Authority in close coordination with Department of Personnel and Training and Central Vigilance Commission has taken a number of anti-corruption measures which fall broadly in the category of surveilance/detective vigilance, punitive action and preventive action.

Apart from keeping watch on officials/officers of doubtful integrity as per the guidelines prescribed by the Department of Personnel & Training, rotational transfers of employees in sensitive posts is being done in a systematic manner besides sending officers of the Vigilance Wing to training courses on a regular basis to keep themselves abreast with the latest rules and regulations.
